

ABSTRACT

In one embodiment, a calendar program is loaded and stored internally within a wireless communication unit. The calendar program is accessed in order to schedule an occurrence of a first event using the calendar program. The first event may cause activation or deactivation of a first operating mode for the wireless communication unit. Such activation or deactivation may occur for a specified period of time.

1002454-10001